	Amendment 1, Q&A: 1) Regarding Buy American Act - depending on the final quote the CO anticipates the following to apply - FAR 52.225-1, Buy American Supplies, paired with the solicitation provision 52.225-2, Buy American Certificate. Both use the DOI class deviation version rather than the stock FAR text. At [IGE] the Israeli Trade Act threshold of $50,000 is not crossed, so 52.225-3 and its alternates do not apply, and the WTO GPA and Trade Agreements clauses are well out of range. COTS status does not except either clause. The clauses still ride in the solicitation and in the award. What COTS changes is how "domestic end product" is evaluated. Under FAR 25.101(a)(2)(ii), the component test, meaning the domestic content percentage, is waived for COTS items. Only the "manufactured in the United States" prong remains. An offeror selling a receptacle manufactured domestically can certify as a domestic end product without a component-by-component analysis of bolts, hinges, fasteners, paint, or finish. The caveat sits at FAR 25.101(a)(2)(ii)(B). The COTS component-test waiver does not extend to end products that are predominantly iron or steel. A steel trash can is squarely in that category. The 95% domestic iron-and-steel content rule still applies, and the offeror has to affirm iron/steel content on the 225-2 certificate, not just U.S. manufacture. Most U.S.-manufactured commercial receptacles clear this, but it is not a rubber stamp and should not be treated as one. 52.225-1 and 52.225-2, DOI deviation versions, in the solicitation and contract. Offeror certifies on 225-2. No component analysis required, iron/steel content still required. 2) Installation will be completed by the park, this answer confirms that installation is not a part of this requirement. 3) The correct model for this solicitation is SD-42 side door receptacle. No further changes. Period of Performance: 04/30/2026 to Continued...
