Standard Form (SF) 30 Continuation Sheet
Solicitation 12639526Q0018 Amendment PA04

The purpose of this amendment is to provide additional Vendor questions submitted to USDA, and the USDA's answers to the questions, as well as photographs that are referenced within the following answers:

Question: The request specifies removal of the existing baler, but does not specifically say that removal of conveyor is also requested. Does the existing conveyor need to be removed? -

Answer: No, the existing conveyor located on the dock and in the baler room can be removed by USDA.

Question: The existing conveyor appears to extend through a wall or into a pit but the photos do not show this clearly. If we are to remove, what is the expectation in terms of using the current pit &/or wall opening, repairing it, etc.? Can additional photos of this area be provided?

Answer: There is currently a garage door separating the two existing conveyors. SEE PHOTOGRAPHS ON PP. 5 – 6 OF THIS DOCUMENT.

Question: The incline angle of the existing conveyor appears to be at a very steep incline angle. If a similar conveyor, at similar incline angle, is desired to feed the new baler, we would like more detail on the type of conveyor being used. We do not feel that a rubber belt slider bed conveyor would be suitable for carrying material to the new baler at this incline angle.

Answer: There are no current issues with the current incline conveyor; USDA does not require and will not allow it to be modified.

Question: The drawing provided shows the new baler in a different location than the current baler. Is the location of the new baler shown accurately? If so & feeding the baler requires a conveyor or feed chute crossing through a wall, whose responsibility is it to provide the wall penetration. Is it possible to receive a drawing showing the desired layout of the new system?

Answer: The drawing displays how the new baler would fit into the room and where the current one is currently located. The baler would keep the same centerline drop point no matter how long the new installed baler is. That is why is drawing has the new baler to the south of the old one. There should not be any wall you have to penetrate. I can get another drawing made but it will not be until next week due to inclement weather.

Question: In the specifications provided, a process where material to be fed into the baler move through an air conveyance/cotton condenser to “drop through a sample buster into the bale press”. Can you provide more detail about the sample buster (i.e. what it is, what it does, where it is physically located, dimensions, and how it interfaces with the bale press)? Is the sample buster located above the bale press? How does the material move from the sample buster to the bale press?

Standard Form (SF) 30 Continuation Sheet
Solicitation 12639526Q0018 Amendment PA04

Answer: A sample buster is installed inside the chute that drops the cotton inside the baler. It spins and has spikes that help break the continuous cotton samples before they make it to the actual press.

Question: The specifications call out items which do not appear to exist in the current configuration – items such as a system to remove the bale, rotate the bale 90 degrees, and place the bale upright on the floor. It appears to reference a powered conveyor, a scissor lift and tilt table, as well as a control cabinet with PLC. We would like to better understand your terminology/wording to understand your expectation of rotating the bales, conveying them, rotating them and placing them upright. Could a visual representation of the desired process be provided? Could we have a site visit to better understand the scope of work?

Answer: An optional site visit has been re-scheduled at the USDA, AMS, Cotton & Tobacco facility in Memphis, TN; the site visit will be held on Monday, February 2, 2026 at 10:00 a.m. CST. See Amendment PA03Standard Form (SF) 30.

No other changes are made; all other terms and conditions remain unchanged.
